Washington celebrates the richness and diversity of its folk art heritage. Survey work done all over the state by the Washington State Folklife Council in the past few years has resulted in the publication of this handsome 128-page book.

An official Washington Centennial project, this book was edited by Jens Lund, with Elizabeth Simpson, includes over a hundred photos, many in color, with essays by folklorists who have conducted field research with Washington folk artists. Included in the collection are chainsaw carving, quilting, lace-making, seed art, embroidery, model boatbuilding, artistic welding, whirligig making, weaving, and more.

Folk Arts of Washington State was funded by the National Endowment for the Arts—Folk Arts Division, the Washington State Centennial Commission, the Washington State Arts Commission, and the Littlefield Foundation.
