Dear Mr. Goodman:

Thank you so much for your interest in SPACES and for your recent letter about the Calendarium in Washington, D. C. Although we had heard about the work of Walter Rothe, we have not very much information about it, nor do we know its current status. We have taken the liberty of xeroxing your photographs for our archives.

I have enclosed some information about SPACES, to let you know a little bit about the work we do. Although, as a small, grassroots organization, we do not even pretend to be able to "protect" all the extant U.S. sites, there are a variety of things that we can do.

It was featured in the December 1975 issue of Esquire magazine in an article compiled by Barbara Damrosch. What we would like to do, at this point, is gather more information about the site and its current status. No one at SPACES has actually had the opportunity to see the Calendarium.

We will write to the address listed in one of the newspaper articles, and will let you know if and when we get a response. If you have further information, please let us know.

Sincerely,

Seymour Rosen
Director
