Com: No. 2	Division: Business Services	Date: April 4, 1990
------------	-----------------------------	---------------------

Background: On July 6, 1988, the Board of Trustees accepted a donation, valued by the donor at $200,000, of the Western folk art collection of John Ehn, who died in 1981 after spending a lifetime assembling and creating the collection at Old Trappers Lodge in Burbank. A portion of the collection known as "Boot Hill", consisting of twenty reinforced concrete folk art sculptures and forty-five wooden or stone "tombstones", was relocated and installed at Cleveland Park in the late summer of 1988.

On January 25, 1989, the Board of Trustees authorized an agreement with the Ehn Trust for the construction of the donated log cabin replica at Cleveland Park on the Pierce College campus.

The Pierce College administration has subsequently requested rescission of the donation as related to the artifacts and works of folk art not yet relocated to the College, and termination of the agreement for construction of the log cabin replica, as the College would like to use the land originally designated for the log cabin for other purposes, and the Ehn Trust has been unable to fund the log cabin replica.
