Dear Seymour,

The documentary on Salvation Mountain and Leonard Knight is edited and I expect to have VHS cassettes ready next week. I will send one to Leonard, one to Gloria Brister, and one to Mark Sloan who was the one who suggested making the documentary in the first place. I will also send a copy to my agent who will try to place it on cable.

Who else should have copies? The show runs just under thirty minutes. The title is SALVATION MOUNTAIN, A Portrait of an Artist.

Leonard is scouting around for someone local (ie. Niland) who would and could run a "Save the Mountain" organization. If he comes up with someone, I'll go down and talk with them. Petitions continue to be spread in the county -- George Dayton had a fresh batch printed -- and names are being collected.

I'm going to be out of the country from the middle of October through November. I hope nobody bulldozes the mountain while I'm gone.

I think the documentary works well, but I always like the things I do. I'll send you a copy, of course, and you can tell me what you think.

Best,

Larry Yust
