I tracked down my friend a Collections Manager for a local museum. Her sister had just died and the family had gathered in Georgia.

By the end of the conversation we both realized she would be a better witness for the Kansas City Art Institute than for you. Most organizations large or small are self insured. All items even in storage, regardless of material need maintenance. Nobody can take that responsibility. They or the family.

You turned over to them some material in very poor condition and as far as I know did no preparation for the transfer.

As to its value. Had you wished to sell the site, how much would that of been before being dismantled.

I realize this is not what you wanted to hear.
