Hi Linda,

I am so glad to make your acquaintance!! Thanks so much for writing. Yes, we do have many images that Seymour shot of your grandmother, Irene Hall, in the archives...I'm sorry that I was never able to visit her site; it looked absolutely fabulous!
Do you have a photo of the doll of yours that Seymour had? I want to make sure that we have it properly identified; I think we only have one horseshoe, tho, so that shouldn't be a problem!
Again, many thanks for your note; I'm so glad to be in touch! We STILL don't have many records of women environment builders; your grandmother is one of a very few, and you should be (and are, I can tell) very proud of her.
All best,
jo

I was saddened to see that Seymour had passed away. I visited him about my husband's grandmother, Irene Hall in the summer of maybe 2005. She had an environment in Eufaula, Oklahoma. I think he was driving around when he happened to find it. She was truly an inspiration to me. I am a painter here in Oklahoma City, and wanted to give you my email address in case you ever need anything about her. He had a horseshoe of hers and a doll of mine. I appreciate all of his efforts and am glad to see it continuing. Let me know if you need to know anything about her. I don't think that many women created environments while she was living. I believe she died in '82. Good luck with your work. Linda Lou Warren
